THE FAR PASTURE.

There are white-crowns, and Herons and Blue.
And Robins and House Wrens—
Though I am to find her.
Nowhere can I find her—
And now it is growing late.
Over the meadows and through the shadows,
I have sought her long and well—
As I have found her,
Till grown almost lost,
Led by the sound of the bell.
She had gone away, and had lost her way.
In the clover blossoms white,
The cool, sweet clover,
Tempted her over.
To the pasture far, tonight,
I tenderly led her, through valley and meadow,
Till I found her over—
Till I found her over—
And who of us always does right?
And the strange feeling is over me,
And seems through the shadows to come,
As beneath the wide bars,
And the silver stars,
"House Wren" and I go home.

The damp dew is falling,
And voices are calling,
I have hurried off from the right,
And the sweet red clover, has tempted me over,
But oh! will he blame me, or seek to restrain me?
If I call to him now, will he come?
And over the meadow, and
Through all the shadows,
Lead his poor wanderer home?
—M. E. NOLAN.

A Little Child Shall Lead Them.
The small but thriving and enterprising town of Seedville, in the State of Ohio, was plentifully posted with bills bearing the above title, lavishly printed in all the hues of the rainbow. How the manager of the Seedville Academy of Music ever succeeded in securing so great a "far of the dramatic firmament" as Charles Cheriton was a matter of much speculation and wonder to all but Seedville citizens; but then Seedville always was smart for a small place and managed to keep abreast of the great cities of the country in everything, from national gas to natural actors. And if the lively manager was enabled to furnish high-class entertainment for the playgoers of Seedville, the said playgoers were not mean enough to pass by the opportunity with an ungrateful indifference. They paid the show-bills, bought their tickets and on every evening thronged the seats of the really pretty theatre.

The piece was what technically known as a high-class comedy, but it was comedy in which was displayed a good deal of the tragedy of mental suffering, of misunderstood, of cross purposes and bitter heart, though, from the fact that all the pain and sorrow was finally turned into gladness and joy through the instrumentality of a little child, men termed it a comedy.
The drama gave the principal actor, Charles Cheriton, a fine opportunity for displaying his power of acting, and many a time had this man moved great audiences almost to tears in his representations of the deep passions of human nature.
On the particular evening which shows our story, Cheriton was at his best. With the rare modulation of his deep, far-reaching voice, with his expressive features and gesticulations betrayed the feelings of the strong before him as the autumn winds bend the topmost boughs of the forest trees.
Toward the end of the second act the large audience noticed that the actor did not do his part justice, and not during the rest of the evening did he rise to his usual standard of excellence. No one knew the cause, for all the intense interest felt in the play, no one had perceived a little boy who had slipped quietly down the extreme left aisle of the balcony. No one but Cheriton. He was in the midst of his delivery of some most pathetic lines and his eyes were raised upward, so that they rested precisely on the balcony side to the left of the stage. He saw the tiny but graceful form of a child—a little girl—not five years old, clad in a quaint, but rich and dainty, dress of black velvet with ruffled sleeves and white lace edging at the wrists and neck; he noticed the broad brimmed hat trimmed with a narrow but exquisite wreath of simple meadow daisies, and above all he beheld, beneath the hat, the cluster of sunny, golden hair and the clear blue eyes of the childish, angel face.

The baby, with baby grace and abandon, stole softly down to the balcony rail, upon which she rested her little arms, and with her chin resting in her dimpled hands (like one of Raphael's cherubs) silently watched the play. Cheriton felt absolutely certain that the baby was the child of—well, a woman he once knew. He was positive of it, and would have backed his opinion with every thing he possessed.

He was no longer in the Seedville Academy of Music. Mechanically he proceeded with his part in the performance, but he saw none of the people before him, save the baby—and even the baby only served to remind him of another face, long gone but to him—while his thoughts and memory were off in a city of the sunny South.

He remembered how in the City of Mexico, exactly six years before, he had loved with a mad and irresistible passion just such a fair sweet face as was the baby's in the balcony; he recollected the Gallies form, the natural grace of movement and the bewitching smile; he called to mind the sunny hair and the quaint dresses of velvet and old lace—yes, it all came back to him with the baby leaning there over the balcony rail. How he tried to forget it all, on the stage and off! How he had sought to bury it far out of his sight and memory! He had traveled East, West and North (never South) only at last to find the past as fresh as ever, in the little theatre of quiet Seedville.

Naught saw he of the footlights on the orchestra, of the stage or the house—he was away on a vine-covered veranda in the outskirts of the City of Mexico. He was telling a fair young girl of his love and admiration, and ringing in his ears was her cold, hard reply: "It is impossible, to-morrow I am to be married."

The second act of the play came to an end. When the curtain rose for the third and last act, the baby had disappeared.

The performance was almost concluded when through that terror-stricken assemblage rang the alarm of "Fire!"

Aroused from his reverie and dreams of the past Cheriton became aware that smoke was issuing from the left wings. He was quickly alive to the situation, and stepping to the edge of the stage, in a loud and commanding voice he directed the movements of the frightened men, women and children.

The fire quickly gained on the building, and before the men in engines of Seedville could get to work the theatre was doomed.

Cheriton was one of the last to leave the stage, and when he did so the danger to the audience was over, for all had reached the street.

When the alarm of fire was given the flames were a beautiful mass of smoke, and as dressed he appeared on the street.

Standing with the crowd watching the flames, was a beautiful woman, perhaps twenty-five or twenty-six years old. As Cheriton emerged from the building he was cheered by the crowd, and casting his eyes (from force of habit acquired on the stage) along the throng of faces, it rested on this woman.

He was seized with an inspiration, and rushing hastily to her, he grasped her arm tightly and almost rudely.

"Were you in the theatre to-night?"

"Yes."

"Alone?"

"No; with my mother."

"No one else—positively, no one else?"

"No one."

"Ah," thought Cheriton, as he hastened away, "the child was left at home and, doubtless, knowing where her mother had gone, followed her to the theatre."

By this time the fire was all over the house and the audience was all with a dense mass of smoke. But heedless of the scorching heat, the blinding and suffocating smoke, and deaf to the warning cries of the firemen, Charles Cheriton rushed into the ill-fated building. He made his way to the left side of the balcony which was standing free, and there, near the railing, fast asleep or dead, he found the fair-haired baby girl. He grabbed a shawl which some one had left in the hurry to escape, and dashing again through the smoke and flames emerged once more on to the street.

A loud burst and deafening roar, and there, near the railing, fast asleep or dead, he found the fair-haired baby girl. He grabbed a shawl which some one had left in the hurry to escape, and dashing again through the smoke and flames emerged once more on to the street.

stand that I loved you. Well! did love you. Perhaps it is unnecessary to say it but I did love you. The man I married—the father of my little girl—died before the baby was born. He was a good man, a good husband, but I did not love him. I loved you all the time and sacrificed love and happiness for what I thought to be duty. Charles, I love you still; you have saved my little girl—will you save me? Save me from a lonely, anxious future and from all the misery of bitter memories? Will you, Charles?

Well, every thing had seemed very strange to Charles Cheriton that New Year's Eve—the place, the baby, the fire, this meeting—let somehow it did not seem at all strange when he passed his large bare and blackened arm around the slender waist, while the wide, rounded head with its fair hair, rested upon the smoke-begrimed skirt which covered his broad shoulder. And he thought of the title of his play—"A Little Child Shall Lead Them."

Two gentlemen were walking on F street yesterday when one said: "Let's cross the street. There comes a man to whom I owe some money, and I don't want to meet him."

"Does he owe you?"

"No; that's the worst of it. He never speaks of it."

After they had crossed over the street walked on some distance in thoughtful silence. Then he said, seriously:

"I wish that man would get mad about it and go at me with a club. I can't pay him the money, and I wish he would thrash me like fury and settle the matter so that I wouldn't ever be afraid again to meet him."

There is a bit of good, clean human nature in that reflection.

The minister was dining with the family, and finally he spoke out:

"Ma, what's an adjective?"

His mother explained the meaning of the word, and then foolishly asked him why he wanted to know.

"Because I heard you say that the sermon this morning was a day-vilish poor one, and when I asked to tell me what 'day-vilish' was he said it was an adjective."

Stranger—Where is the county seat?

Kanana (as "dark, round-shaped cloud" approaches)—What, it's you if that that cyclone goes down towards Henderson's. If it don't the location of the county seat is liable to be soon indicated as 'prominent-like' to speak.

A well-known novelist announces that he is about to write a book which shall go a long way towards bridging the psychological distance which separates the gulf from the gentleman. He has not himself a hard task. It is to bridge the "psychological" for "gentle" and "stupid" for "gentleman" he would be sure of success.

Huntersville, W. Va.

May 16 1889.

The town of Stafford, Kan., was wiped out by a cyclone last week.

There is going on in Richmond, Va. a tremendous religious upheaval among the negroes.

Two young men in Summerset, Pa., hanged their father to get their inheritance.

Was it the Harrison family or the republican party that was elected last November.

All the records smashed. The City of Paris crosses the ocean in 5 days 23 hours and 7 minutes.

The State claims 90,000 population for Richmond, with a suburban population of 25,000 more.

The Parkersburg Journal seems to think that the prospects for the "Black Diamond" railroad are more encouraging.

Had it been Cleveland, it would have been tariff reduction as it is, Harrison and wage reduction, remarks an observant exchange.

Carter B. Harrison, who was last week appointed marshal of the middle district of Tennessee, is a brother of the President.

Mrs. Louisa Shaffly, of Staunton, is dead. It was just about four weeks after the death of her lamented husband, Judge Shaffly.

The only woman ever convicted of horse stealing in Missouri was a beautiful girl of 18 years, on May 7. The jury gave her two years.

It is said that they have had to put folding beds into the White House to accommodate the numerous branches of the presidential family.—Ex.

Henry W. Grady, editor of the Atlanta Constitution, is to address the literary societies of the University of Virginia at their final celebration on the 25th of June.

It is intimated the President will spend a portion of the heated term in the mountains of West Virginia, near Davis, on the new West Virginia Central Railroad.

It is conceded by republicans as well as democrats that the best all round speech at the New York Centennial was delivered by ex-President Cleveland in response to the toast, "Our country."—Ex.

Frank W. Palmer, of Illinois, has been appointed Public Printer. The newspapers offices along the rail-ways leading out of Washington will now prepare for a deluge of tramp printers.—Ex.

Where is the increase in the price of wheat that the republican orators told you about so positively last fall if a republican President was elected at? In fact where is anything true anything told you?

SEVEN fourth class postmasters were removed in Pocahontas county last week. Clarkson is getting in his work pretty fast.—Braxton Democrat.

Mr. Democrat we haven't heard of them as yet.

There are five banks and six newspapers and an average daily sale of fifty dollars worth of postage stamps in Guthrie, Oklahoma, a town which did not exist prior to April 22nd. In a few days more we may expect to hear it boasting with the rest of its occidental contemporaries of "the finest opera house west of the Mississippi."

Where is the protection to American labor that you republicans talk about? We don't know where it is! but there is one thing we do know, that there are thousands of working men, working for whatever compensation they can get, and thousands upon thousands who are out of employment altogether, and have large families in a starving condition.

West Virginia is talking a phenomenal boom. More miles of railroad will be constructed during the present year than in any other year in her history, and she is a Democratic state, too. Our Republican friends who are continually howling about old fogies and mossbacks and claiming that nothing but a Republican administration can attract capital into a state, should make a note of this.—Charleston Daily Star.

Rather a funny little episode happened near Philippi last week. A young man went to the clerk of the court and obtained a permit to wed a young lady. On his way home he called at the residence of another young lady, to whom he had been paying some attention, and exhibited to her his license to wed her rival. She, with rather more spirit than her sex usually possesses, getting the paper into her possession. Very deliberately proceeded to tear it to pieces, and consign it to the flames, and the young man was compelled to postpone the wedding to another day.—Nicholas Chronicle.

The New York World sees in Mr. Cleveland's conduct, since his retirement from the Presidency, many evidences that he again aspires to become his party's leader in the next National struggle. It sees in Mr. Harrison's disregard of the civil service, and the consequent disgust of the ungovernable element with the President, an opportunity for Mr. Cleveland. It says: "If Mr. Cleveland can and will make himself the exponent and champion of the real ideas and true principles of Reform—reform in politics, reform in administration, reform in legislation, reform in justice—his nomination would be quite possible, and he would have a vigorous supporter in the World."

Is it possible that the World is beginning to arrive at the light at last? It lists a number of reforms which it would have Mr. Cleveland to make himself the champion and exponent of, on condition of its vigorous support. It'll could Mr. Cleveland say to this proposition: "All these things have I kept from my youth up." The World knows that it is setting no pattern for Mr. Cleveland. He walked the reformer's path all through his administration, and hence his defeat. No man could have done more than he in the way of the reforms indicated—because no man was ever more honest, or firmer than he. The open opposition of the World to Mr. Cleveland began the very hour of his inauguration, and was fierce, relentless and unjust from that day till now. We are glad to see it ready to acknowledge at last that the man to lead the Democracy to victory in 1892 is Grover Cleveland.—Kansas Gazette.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

WASHINGTON, May 16th.—Harrison made the best appointment that he has yet made when he selected Ex-Gov. Thompson, of South Carolina, as the democratic member of the Civil Service Commission. Gov. Thompson was Assistant Secretary of the Treasury under Cleveland's administration, and was during the last days of Congress appointed by Mr. Cleveland to the same position he has just received from a Republican President, but the Senate did not act on his nomination.

There is a weeping and wailing, and gushing of tears among the little crowd of late applicants for the position of Public Printer, five of whom are understood to have made a combination, each promising to give the other four appointments in the office if made Public Printer, over the fact that the coveted prize has gone to Ex-Congressman Frank W. Palmer, formerly postmaster at Chicago. Whether Harrison suspected the "combine" which these applicants had entered into I can not say, but it is known that some days ago he told a gentleman that he should not appoint any of the applicants up to that time and asked him to name a good man for the office. Palmer was named, and after further investigation the office was tendered to him, and he accepted it. When the appointment was made public it was really amusing to see the members of the "combine" chasing around trying to find somebody to introduce them to the new Public Printer so they could get in their applications for the "fat" positions under him. It is thought that one of these men—Donath, nominally of Pennsylvania, really of the District of Columbia, may lose his mind so great a shock has the disappointment been at not being made Public Printer. He was so certain that he was to get the appointment that he had already given away several of the most important places in the Government Printing office.

It is evidently the purpose of the the republican politicians to make the census bureau an asylum for their political proteges. The Interior Department has decided that the appointments in this bureau will have next year when it gets regularly to work, over 1500 clerks, besides an army of special agents, and the most of these will be kept for two years or longer. It will be a great convenience to prominent republicans to use these positions to pay off their political debts, and if the appointments were made under civil service rules that would be impossible.

The first of the fifteen contested election cases which are to come before the Fifty-first Congress was opened by the Clerk of the House this week. It was Calmar vs. Morgan, of the second Mississippi District.

Harrison having provided a snug place for his brother is now, so it is said, about to appoint Blaine's brother to one of the most lucrative local offices in Washington Register of Wills.

The new Secretary of Agriculture in order to prove his familiarity with farming implements, and maybe to get solid with the farmers of the country, put in a half an hour cutting grass with a scythe in the grounds surrounding his department, one day this week. Of course he was entirely ignorant of the fact that several newspaper men had their eyes on him during the entire performance.

Republicans are already beginning to compare Harrison with Hays and Arthur, they say that he is timid almost to the extent of cowardice.

It is said that the Post office Department is appointing clerks to the Railway Mail Service and dating their appointments in April in order to avoid compliance with civil service rules under which all such appointments should have been made since May.

Senator Gorman thinks that Calvin S. Rice will be elected chairman of the National democratic committee to succeed the late ex-Senator Harrison. This is taken leave to mean that Senator Gorman will not accept the position.

Theodore Roosevelt of N. Y., who has just been appointed as one of the republican Civil Service Commissioners, is a pronounced free trader. Funny isn't it, that a man elected President solely because he was a rigid protectionist should give such a prominent appointment to a free trader.

The newspaper man's luck has not yet deserted him. The new Public Printer is a member of the fraternity.

"An Era of Prosperity."

On the fourth of March the Republican legislature of Kansas, after staging a "Praise God from whom all blessings flow," passed a resolution "that we congratulate the nation upon the incoming at this moment of a republican administration, and a consequent era of prosperity and good government." A few days later came the failure of the Reading iron works with liabilities of nearly $2,000,000, and throwing 2,000 men out of employment. Then the failure of the Excelsior pottery of Trenton, N. J., employing 300 hands, followed by the shutting down of the rolling mills at Reading, Nantux and Cabotville, Pa., and the Findlay, O., iron and steel company, with liabilities of over $100,000. A few more days passed and then came a look-out at the Fall River, Mass., calico works, in which 6,000 men, women and children were thrown out of employment. Scarcely a day passes without a forcible reminder from somewhere that the "era of prosperity" of which the Kansas senate spoke has dawned upon the country. This is shown by the reduction of wages of mechanics and laborers and a decrease in the price of farm products all over the land. It is probably an "era of prosperity" for somebody and "protection" is doubtless a big thing for somebody, but for whom? Is it for the laborer, the mechanic, the farmer or the producer in any of the branches of manufacture or trade? Not much. Such prosperity is not recognized by the money kings and the gentlemen who now have our government under their control. It may be an "era of prosperity" for them and it doubtless is. If it did not pay them to pursue their present tactics and if it did not pay the millionaire manufacturers to shut down their works they would not do it, would they? Well, it is hardly probable. But what are you going to do about it? "Protection" is the watchword of the administration that will be in power for nearly four years to come and if the people, who are supposed to be the real rulers of the country do not develop more good sense during that time than they showed at the last election, it is likely to remain so for four years longer. The workmen who voted for Harrison and the kind of "protection" to American labor by the broad shield of American law, that Gen. Grant left, about ten years ago, "What are you going to do about it, like a man. He asked for it, and he has got it, but we imagine that it does not taste so good as he thought it would. Experience is said to be a dear school, and it has doubtless been a dear one to many a blundering man who has followed his party wherever it led, without stopping to ask himself what his own interests were. But after all, they may learn something by it, and we hope they will. If not, we had better turn the country into a vast bird asylum and let "protection" rule the roost until its followers starve to death hugging their idol, which is in reality the most gigantic fraud of the nineteenth century.—Charleston Star.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our regular correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, May 17th.—Hon. Samuel J. Randall, who has been confined to his residence in this city for several weeks past, is now much better, although not yet well enough to get out of doors. He contemplates spending the summer at the seashore.

Solicitor General Jenks, of the Department of Justice, who tendered his resignation at the beginning of the present administration, has been notified of its acceptance by the President to take effect on the 15th inst. Mr. Jenks will continue in the service of the Government as counsel in the telephone cases until they are disposed of. This position was the bone of contention which brought on the recent bitter wrangle between Senators Sherman and Quay. It was privately promised to Sherman's candidate, Alphonse Hart, of Ohio, some weeks ago, but for some unknown cause the appointment has not yet been publicly announced.

Ex-Senator Kiddleberger, would be Congressman Laughton and other anti-Mahone Republicans came to Washington and this life President all they want to, but so far everything given out in Virginia has gone to a Mahone man.

A big scramble is now taking place daily at the Government Printing Office, Palmer the new Public Printer having taken charge of the office Monday, since which time he has hardly been allowed an opportunity to eat or sleep so great is the rush. He has made but few appointments yet, but one of those few Chief time keepers, was secured by ex-Senator "Bully" Chandler, of New Hampshire, who is one of Palmer's lieutenants, for his private secretary. "Bully's" friends are so likely to be heard from when the contracts for the year's supplies for the office are made next month.

Chief Justice Fuller has gone to Norfolk, and from there he will proceed to South Carolina on his district tour.

Harrison's first negro appointment Rev. James Townsend of Indiana, to be recorder of the General Land Office has created quite a commotion in the Land Office. In the division of which Townsend is to be Chief there are 25 white lady clerks and every one of them is trying to get transferred to some other division in order to escape the negro chief. As one of the ladies puts it: "We naturally have to pay a certain amount of court and deference to our Chief, and it will be very disagreeable for me to treat a negro as my superior. I shall get into some other division if I can; if not I suppose I shall have to stand it, as my husband and better depends upon it."

Oklahoma does not propose getting left in the great scramble for office. Corporal Tanner has appointed a board of pension examiners for Guthrie, and the Civil Service Commissioners have received a letter asking how soon examinations are to be held in Oklahoma.

It is said that the Sherman and Frazier factions of Ohio Republicans have got up a compromise on the Federal offices in Cincinnati, and that ex-Mayor Amor-Smith will be surveyor and Col. D. W. McClellan collector. The first is a Sherman man and the latter pins his faith to Frazier.

One man has appeared here as a candidate for office that every respectable man in the country should rejoice to see disappointed. I refer to W. E. Haskell, editor of the Minneapolis Tribune, who wants to be minister to Denmark. Haskell is the man who publicly insulted Mrs. Cleveland by a scandalous editorial in the columns of his paper while she and her husband were the guests of his city. It is surprising that he could get anybody to endorse his application.

The Court of Claims has decided that the celebrated Triggs' sword, which have been in the custody of the Treasury department ever since the war should be turned over to Mr. Myers, the executor of the General Triggs' estate.

Ex-Congressman Ochiltree, who spends his time in New York, but for political purposes, claims a residence in Texas, says that Harrison has given him control of all the Federal patronage of Texas. It may be just as Mr. Ochiltree says, but you know Mr. Ochiltree is the champion rancor of the country. Ex Public Printer Benedict and brother, ex chief clerk of the Government Printing office have been presented with handsome gold-headed canes by the clerical force of that office.

A Mystery Death.

On Wednesday of last week some fishermen discovered the body of a man lying on the bank of Green River, about three miles above Alderson, in Fort Spring district, this county. The body had evidently floated down during the recent rise in the river and deposited where found. The authorities of that district were notified, and a jury of inquest went down from Rosecrute to investigate the matter. The body was very much decomposed, and was that of a man 35 years of age and was well dressed, having on a tailor made suit of clothes, worth about $35 or $40. Nothing on his body was found to identify him. The only articles found were a couple of pocket handkerchiefs a money purse, (no money in it,) and a small knife. There were some indications that he might have been foully dealt with, but no doctor being present at the inquest, this was not positively ascertained. He was evidently above ordinary men in position and circumstances, but who he was and how he met his death are mysteries.—Green River Independent.

In New York.

THE WEST VIRGINIA TROOPS CHECKED FROM ONE OF THE LINKS TO THIS ORDER.

A gentleman who returned from New York, and who saw the great parade there, says the West Virginia delegation showed up in great shape. There were about 150 members of the National Guard in line from this State, being headed by Gov. E. W. Wilson, Gen. E. L. Wood and the Governor's Staff, including Col. A. A. Franzheim of Wheeling. Then came the Governor's Guard and the two companies of 150 men. The boys marched like old timers and where cheered all along the line.

There were few Governors in the line who received more cheers than Governor Wilson and he was one of the very few who received bouquets. While passing up Fifth avenue an immense bouquet of carnations was thrown to the Governor from one of the masses on that thoroughfare.

The Governor's Guard band was along and made splendid music, and altogether the turnout was a creditable one for which the men should receive praise, as they all paid their own expenses.—Herald News.

There are fifteen contested Congressional election cases to be settled by the next Congress. Three of these are from West Virginia.

The Illinois house passed the bill appropriating $50,000 for a monument to the late John A. Logan.

The West Virginia soldier boys gets $8,685 as their share of the $400,000 appropriated by the last Congress for distribution among the National Guards of the several States.

The Supreme court has decided that the Scott Chinese exclusion act is unconstitutional. This must be quite unpleasant to Gen. Harrison and other lovers of the almond-eyed Mongolian.

Notes by the Way.
This is a most pleasant time for joints over the country, and your correspondent has never had more exquisite enjoyment than the past few weeks. One recent morning while reflecting on the beauty of natural scenery, the writer felt that he ought to be very careful to keep the commandments of the Lord his God, to walk in his ways and to fear Him, for God in his providence in permitting him to have a home in Pocahontas, brought him into a good land of water of brooks and of fountains that spring out of valleys and hills; a land of wheat and barley and vines and honey; a land wherein one may eat bread without scarceness; a land whose stones are iron, see Deuteronomy 8, 9 and 11.

It would be hard to find a region that has more points of resemblance to the promised land, than our section of West Virginia.

The flowery spring at my command Refreshes the air and cools the land.

The ruminant says with right shame, To raise the crops and cheer the vine, A useful lesson.

Last Sabbath morning, May 12, while on the pleasant way to Huntersville, where a most enjoyable sermon was to be given, we witnessed of the happy people in the world, in spiritual school and preaching scene, we need for a time was preoccupied with reflections suggested by a little spruce pine tree, near Split Island.

It is growing upon the decaying branch of a sycamore tree, that overhangs the water.

It is only a question of time when the branch to which it clings will fall away, and then all will be swept down the flood, and it will never be the tree it would have been, had it chosen a more lowly place to live in.

For the present it seems to have the preeminence over its contemporaries, but it will not be so, very long, for its very growth and development, but shortens the time of its ruin.

This world like the decaying branches is passing away, and if our immortal nature should have nothing but it to cling to and be nourished by, then its ruin is only a question of fleeting time, when to be swept away by the "dark rolling flood."

GOOD READING.
Some of the best reading accessible to your correspondent, he gets from Lovell's Library. In a recent issue, Farrar's "Beckers after God" makes a sad denunciation of the worst of pagan morality and the teacher to Nero, the vilest of pagan rulers.

The author points out the mistake Seneeca, made in teaching his illustrious pupil. Seneca neglected to take to heart, what Homer taught: "It is better to die than to live in sin." He allowed Nero to indulge in same bad habits, so as to keep him from worse ones, and hence it was an education of compromise. So alike in the attitudes of Nero's boyhood, and undaunted him respecting the graver temptations of his manhood, Seneeca acted on Commissioner's Sale.

Pursuant to a decree of the Circuit Court of Pocahontas County, rendered in the Chancery Cause of E. J. Mills vs. James P. Ginger and Wm. C. McElwee on the 1st day of April 1880, I, the undersigned, appointed by said decree shall on proceed in front of the Court house of this County to sell at public auction to the highest bidder, for Cash, a certain tract of land containing about 35 acres, the property of the defendant James P. Ginger, situate on the waters of Skunking Creek, adjoining the lands of the Heirs of A. D. Grimes and others. This tract of land is fertile and productive and is a fertile piece of California.

THIS DAY OF JUNE 1880

L. M. McElwee.
Special Commissioner of the Circuit Court of Pocahontas County, ordered that the above Commission be given to the undersigned by said Court.
